Children’s Books: Where Worlds Meet
IBBY Regional Conference
October 2-4, 2009
St. Charles, Illinois

“The conference theme ‘Children’s Books: Where Worlds Meet’ captures the spirit of what will happen over the course of three days as people from numerous parts of the globe come together to read, discuss, share, and revel in books that take us to worlds real and imaginary, offer insights into other people and ways of life, and promote international understanding through children’s books.”

USBBY Members eagerly anticipate this transforming experience at the serene and scenic Q Center in St. Charles.

USBBY recognizes Alida Cutts for her many years of devoted service. Alida has recently retired from the position of USBBY Executive Secretary. Many personal and professional memories of members highlight the significant role Alida has had in USBBY history and continuing growth.
WHAT IS USBBY?
The United States Board on Books for Young People is the United States Section of the International Board on Books for Young People and is a place for those interested in national and international activities related to children’s literature. USBBY publishes a semi-annual newsletter for its members, maintains an active Web site, sponsors regional conferences which feature speakers of international interest, and co-sponsors sessions held at conferences of the American Library Association, the International Reading Association, and the National Council of Teachers of English. The USBBY provides a discounted rate to members for subscriptions to Bookbird, a quarterly international journal on literature for children. It encourages the provision of high quality literature for young people throughout the world, and it cooperates with organizations which have similar objectives. USBBY gives thankful acknowledgement to author and illustrator Chris Raschka for our unique USBBY newsletter masthead and logo.

From the USBBY President

If you really want to understand what USBBY is all about and why it is important to you, you should go to a family wedding – as I did the other day - where siblings whom you haven’t seen for a while will quiz you about that you’ve been up to lately. As I tried to explain to these well-meaning, inquisitive interlocutors what it means to be President of USBBY – while the appetizers were being cleared away and before the main course was served – I was obliged to focus my thoughts! Long, rambling explanations were clearly not in order. A few pithy remarks were called for to answer the questions: what is USBBY, what do we do, and why do we do it?

In other words, I was working on my “elevator speech” about USBBY – the brief but informative answer you have to give when someone questions you during an elevator ride. I recommend you practice yours, too. If you can answer those three questions really well in sixty seconds, you’re on your way to becoming an effective ambassador for USBBY, and in the process you may become more committed to it yourself!

In a way, that’s a metaphor for some of the things we’ve been working on during this year. Clear communication and outreach, both among us and beyond us, is key to our effectiveness. To that end, we’ve created a new membership brochure that more clearly defines our mission and activities, and a new logo that specifically states that USBBY is the US national section of IBBY (our old logo did not convey that). Our website, managed by Linda Pavonetti, has undergone great improvements. You can now play a power-point presentation of our latest list of “Outstanding International Books” directly from the site (thank you, committee chair Elizabeth Poe), or request it on a disk. The area of our site promoting the 8th IBBY Regional Conference, built by Bill Teale, is a “site within a site” designed to convey all the information you’re looking for with maximum ease of navigation. A video clip of yours truly introducing the conference – one of Junko Yokota’s many bright ideas (at least it seemed like a good idea at time!) – helps humanize the site and give it a more contemporary feel in this “You Tube” age.

Our Publicity Committee, chaired by Doris Gebel, has been hard at work getting USBBY’s message out into the world, promoting both our conference and our co-sponsored sessions though press releases, numerous list-serv postings, and distribution of literature at conferences. When our Hans Christian Andersen Award committee (chaired by Amy McClure) chose Eric Carle and Walter Dean Myers as our US nominees for this prestigious international award – the Nobel Prize of children’s literature – our press release on this garnered significant publicity for USBBY. Meanwhile, our executive secretary, Ellis Vance, has been doing sterling work with targeted email messages to members, former members, and former conference attendees – hopefully no one can complain they were not contacted! As our main liaison with other IBBY sections, Ellis has also been working with our ‘twinning partners’ in other countries to post news of their activities on our website – another way we can support their efforts.

An organization that is thriving should be expanding its membership. More members means more income, more activities that can be funded, and of course a greater voice for what we do. Our focus on membership recruitment and retention has taken various forms, including mailings to leading children’s literature advocates in ALA, IRA, and NCTE who are not (yet) USBBY members, and emails to former members encouraging them to rejoin. At long last, we have taken a quantum leap into the internet age by providing online membership application and renewal by credit card on our website (no more printing out a form and mailing it by snail-mail – duh!). Board member Scottie Bowditch of Penguin has been working on recruiting more publisher sponsor members, while new Board member Marjorie Naughton of Clarion Books is leading an initiative to recruit more authors and illustrators to our membership, in collaboration with former USBBY President Judy O’Malley.

And the rest is up to you! We encourage you to get involved in spreading the word about USBBY. Practice your “elevator speech” until it’s really compelling. Then see if you can get colleagues and friends to join USBBY – by telling them about it in sixty seconds! If each of us could recruit just one additional member – wow – we would double in size. We could do it in a minute!

By the time this newsletter reaches you, it will only be a few short weeks to our 8th IBBY Regional Conference in St. Charles, IL, Oct 2-4, 2009. The conference promises to be outstanding. The line-up of speakers – from more than fifteen countries on five continents – is truly amazing. If you haven’t yet signed up, go to the USBBY website (www.usbby.org) and do it now! This is one conference you don’t want to miss. I look forward to seeing you there.

Sincerely,

John Mason, 2009 USBBY President
WHAT IS IBBY?

The International Board on Books for Young People was begun in 1953. IBBY’s mission is to promote international understanding through children's books; to give children everywhere the opportunity to have access to books with high literary and artistic standards; to encourage the publication and distribution of quality children's books, especially in developing countries; to provide support and training for those involved with children and children's literature; and to stimulate research and scholarly works in the field of children's literature.

The organization is composed of 61 National Sections operating on both national and international levels. IBBY's policies and programs are determined by its Executive Committee—ten people from different countries and a President elected by the National Sections during the biennial General Assembly held at each IBBY Congress. IBBY's activities include:

- The Hans Christian Andersen Awards
- The IBBY Honour List, a biennial selection of outstanding, recently published books honoring writers, illustrators, and translators
- IBBY Congresses
- IBBY workshops and seminars for developing countries
- The IBBY-Asahi Reading Promotion Award
- The IBBY Documentation Centre of Books for Disabled Children and Young People
- Publication of Bookbird, IBBY's quarterly journal
- The annual celebration of International Children's Book Day on April 2

As the 8th IBBY Regional Conference is soon to occur, those who have experienced a regional conference eagerly anticipate the spirit of community that bonds individuals who come from around the globe as speakers, participants, inquirers, and learners. They look forward to the formal and informal events that speak to the possibilities of international children’s books. As the conference planners stated in the last newsletter, “The conference theme ‘Children’s Books: Where Worlds Meet’ captures the spirit of what will happen over the course of three days as people from numerous parts of the globe come together to read, discuss, share, and revel in books that take us to worlds real and imaginary, offer insights into other people and ways of life, and promote international understanding through children’s books.” This three day conversation that includes internationally known speakers, book discussions, exhibits, and time to browse and read has the potential to provoke thinking and introspection long after the conference.

For those who have not attended an IBBY Regional Conference, this opportunity is like reading a good book—you can tell others about it with great enthusiasm, but only when each person is in the middle of his or her own transaction with the text will the person know its transforming effect. USBBY, however, can tell you about the main characters—the guest speakers—for the weekend. Creators of children’s books, such as Ana Maria Machado, Shaun Tan, Katherine Patterson, Naomi Shahib Nye, Vladimir Radunsky, and Klaas Verplancke, will take part as will others who play significant roles in IBBY and the publishing of children’s literature around the world: Patsy Aldana, Carmen Diana Dearden, Yonannes Gebregzegeorgis, Arvind Kumar, Arnold Levine, Liz Page, Christianne Rab, and others. USBBY can also tell you about the books that you are encouraged to read before the conference for small group discussions. (These can be purchased through most book stores, such as Amazon or Barnes and Noble.)

The Lost Thing by Shaun Tan, published by Lothian Children’s Books, 2008;
Flotsam by David Wiesner, published by Clarion Books, 2006;
From Another World by Ana Maria Machado, published by Groundwood Books, 2005;
Wanting Mor by Rukhsana Khan, published by Groundwood Books, 2009;

USBBY can also describe some of the sessions in an attempt to share the power of this event. Sessions include topics like Translation/Bringing International Books to the US, Third World Literacy Relief, Storytelling Around the World, Children’s Literature in Ireland, Native Languages Books, and the Jane Addams Award. Also, the exhibits offer the opportunity to read titles that are not always as accessible nor are they always in an atmosphere where their message is so deeply internalized. The exhibits include: The International Youth Library’s “An Imaginary Library: Children’s Books That Don’t Exist (Yet...)”, the 2008 IBBY Honour List, and the “Outstanding Books for Young People with Disabilities.”

But, only if you participate will you know the transforming experience that will continue to influence your thinking well past the first weekend of October. Those who have attended the IBBY Regional Conference in past years sincerely hope to meet many returning as well as new attendees in St. Charles this fall. They believe such experiences serve to make the world a better place because of what participants take away to share with others. Whether you are teachers of children and adolescents; public librarians and school librarians; authors, illustrators, translators, and editors of literature for youth; publishers; children’s literature scholars; or other participants deeply interested in international children’s books and people’s perspectives on those books, you will want to be part of this community. For further information about the conference to include registration and room reservations, see the USBBY website at: www.usbby.org. Click on the “8th Regional IBBY Conference” on the left menu.
A Tribute in Memories to Alida Cutts
Recently Retired, Long-time, Executive Secretary of USBBY

During a recent IRA talk, Ben Carson reminded us that responsible use of one’s abilities involves using your talents to elevate other people. For USBBY members who have worked with Alida, this well describes the energy, dedication, and love with which she elevated her colleagues as well as those many children and adults for whom literature is available because of her ongoing work. Her generosity of talents and time over many years was so highly regarded that the Alida Cutts Lifetime Membership Award was established to honor extraordinary service to USBBY. Alida, of course, was the first recipient and was followed by Mary Lou White and Joan Glazer. The memories shared here are but a glimpse into Alida’s influences on USBBY members.

MY FINE-FEATHERED FRIEND: ALIDA von KROGH CUTTS

Just out my kitchen window is a bird bath. I delight in the comings and goings of these fine-feathered friends who sip and dart and splash in the water. My friend Alida is much like those warblers, finches, jays, and more.

First, she rises early most mornings and goes out to find….a good pool for an early swim or a nice 8 blocks in the city for a quick stroll before breakfast. She stops for a first cup of coffee (and brings one to her room-mate) before preening her looks and flying off for the day. (Like the early bird, she always gets her worm!)

Similar to birds hopping about in a tree, Alida flits from project to project...talking with folks all over the world about getting work done or problems solved, planning conferences that bring people together, and finishing the routines of work. Then she wings off to hike the Maine woods, go birding along the Delaware River, hear the latest opera with her sister, make cookies with grandson Connor, and coordinate the next visit to NYC with the USBBY crowd. (I’m recipient of this latter event!)

Like the birds who come to my birdbath, Alida graces my life with bright eyes and enthusiasm, with loyalty and friendship, and with passion to share cultures and good stories through literature and a glass of good wine (not worms!!) She is a wonderful fine-feathered friend and I look forward to see where she will soar next.

In the many years that Alida and I have helped represent Bookbird, Inc. at the IBBY Executive Committee meetings, we have walked together from our hotels to the meeting laces. I joke that in Bologna it is a 45 minute walk - unless I’m with Alida. Then it’s a 30 minute run. It is this energy and efficiency that have not just helped her friends to get in shape but that have empowered much of Alida’s effective leadership in USBBY. She has always been prepared, always been filled with ideas, always been ready to explore new and varied directions. When I served as president of USBBY, I was especially appreciative of her guidance. She brought both the practical needs of the organization and a sense of history to my attention, ensuring that I did the best job I could. USBBY has been very, very lucky to have had an executive secretary of the caliber of Alida Cutts and I wish her only good things - and continued speed and energy - in her retirement.

Joan Glazer
Tribute to Alida on her Retirement with many Fond Memories….

Sometimes someone enters your life that has a tremendous impact! Alida Cutts was that kind of person for me. She is and has been a role model, a mentor, and a friend over many years. I first met Alida at an IRA/USBBY co-sponsored session during an International Reading Association Convention at least twenty-five years ago. I was immediately drawn into the work of USBBY through its message, its mission, its activities and projects, and devoted disciples like Alida. I immediately joined USBBY and over the years saw Alida at many of its co-sponsored sessions. At one of those meetings Alida asked me if I would consider being an IRA representative on the USBBY Board and I immediately said yes. That was the beginning; Alida had opened the door allowing me to take, what has become, a most satisfying and worthwhile journey in an organization that does so much good for children worldwide; and providing a memorable journey of friendship with Alida as well.

When Alida decided last year to step down as USBBY Executive Secretary, after many years in that position, I had had the wonderful experience of serving on the Board with her for more than a decade. So when I was chosen to succeed her in that role, it was a comfortable decision to make because she had served as a wonderfully supportive role model. For the past six years, Alida and I have shared experiences, responsibilities, and decision-making as Board Members of IBBY’s Journal, Bookbird as well.

During these years on the USBBY and Bookbird executive boards, she and I have had the opportunity to share many travels, interesting places, wonderful sites, inspiring museums, plays and musical events, and fabulous food. This includes our USBBY annual meeting in New York City and yearly Bookbird meeting in Bologna, Italy in connection with IBBY and the well-known Bologna Children’s Book Fair.

With these years of memorable experiences, our friendship has grown. I have come to appreciate her knowledge of art and music, her ability to speak not only English, but also German, French, Spanish, and Italian, her sense of humor, and last, but not least, her limitless energy. She can walk further and faster than anyone I know. I can personally attest to this given our almost annual walk to the Sanctuary of the Madonna di San Luca located on top of Guardia hill above Bologna. To get there, you walk almost four kilometers uphill through 666 covered archways. And, while I am huffing and puffing all the way and praying for a cool day, Alida marches along without even breaking a sweat. Of course there is always a reward at the top as we visit the sanctuary and sip glasses of great red Italian wine accompanied by exquisite pasta and perhaps a glass of Grappa to finish. She also has her favorite eating establishments like Anna Maria’s, where she knows the owner and the waiters by name and they know her by first name as well.

Alida, I look forward to many more years of experiences and travels with you and the many fond memories these will continue to provide. I have a feeling that this journey has only started for those of us that are lucky enough to travel this road together and that the best is yet to come! Thanks Alida! You have been such an asset to the growth and success of USBBY over many years and a wonderful personal friend to me!

V. Ellis Vance, July 4, 2009
I first met Alida at various USBBY co-sponsored sessions at NCTE conferences. She seemed worldly and formidable. Then when I stepped in as editor of the USBBY newsletter in 2000, I learned how knowledgeable she was about USBBY and international literature for young people. When I served as President of USBBY 2006, she was an amazing right-hand. Now, I've made my first trip to the Bologna Children's Book Fair as editor of BOOKBIRD (where she serves on the board) and she was so gracious and helpful in guiding me through my first trip to the fair. And to top it off, her own passport went missing and she had to spend an extra week navigating red tape and the U.S. consulate-- always with such a positive, upbeat attitude. She's been the "face" of USBBY for so many people, and I feel lucky to count her as a colleague and world-class friend.

Sylvia Vardell

When I was struggling to get GLOBAL CONNECTIONS, the International Board on Books for Young People Regional Conference USBBY IV/Reading the World IV - October 12, 13, 14, 2001 off the ground, following the tragedy of September 11, 2001, it seemed our world was falling apart. I could, however, always count on direct and wise advice from Alida. There were moments when none of us believed we would ever pull this event off, what with the cancellations of speakers and participants who were afraid to fly along with much pressure from the hotel to guarantee high numbers. Alida was a rock solid foundation for us. She was composed and helpful all the way through the planning, the conference itself, and the follow up after. Thank you, Alida for your calm presence and sound guidance during a very stressful period.

Beverly Hock

Alida will always be the “face and heart of IRA” to me. She has been a tremendous resource and support to the members of the IRA Board of Directors and is both loved and admired by them. Her professionalism, competence, and caring have also endeared her to members of the Association at large. I wish her every happiness in the years to come.

Best Wishes
Doris Walker-Dalhouse
IRA Board of Directors 2000-2003
Dear Alida,

I thought about writing a poem in your honor, but it is impossible to produce rhymes for efficient, knowledgeable, reliable, memory like a steel trap (hmm, I can think of one word that rhymes with trap—but that applies to others, not you!). Ever since the first USBBY meeting I attended, your composure, organizational skills, knowledge and leadership have awed me. I felt that I’d never live up to your expectations for the board. But thanks to your tutelage and endless patience, I survived my term on the board and three years in the presidential rotation. Without you, USBBY would definitely be a different organization—and not half as altruistic or respected by the world’s reading community. You have kept us on the right track, reminded us of deadlines, provided stern reprimands (when necessary), laughed and cried, celebrated and mourned, and unified a disparate group. For these things, I am grateful.

But I also want to make it clear, I am grateful for your friendship. Unlike many others who have contributed to your retirement memories, I have not known you for a lifetime but I hope that our friendship will continue into your—and my—retirement years. In this, you are the fortunate one for I fear I will be working until I’m unable to stand—and then they might prop me in a chair and tell me to keep the students busy! We’ve been celebrating your retirement for months now, and I think it will continue for a few more, at least through December. We will all look back at 2009 as the year of Alida’s Retirement. You will never be replaced in our organizations, our hearts, or our memories.

Fondly,

Each memory here represents thousands of others about Alida Cutts—the USBBY and IBBY leader, the international traveler, the mentor, supporter, and friend. Each memory is a glimpse of her influence on the world of international children’s books and on those whose work continues to bridge the world through children’s books. The lives touched cannot be measured, but we need only to look at the growing significance of USBBY and international literature to realize the impact that Alida’s efforts continue to have on the work begun by Jella Lepman. We offer a heartfelt, Thank You!!

“Mixing it Up”: A recap of the USBBY/YALSA panel from ALA Annual in Chicago

by Marianne Martens

At ALA Annual, USBBY and YALSA presented a program called “Mixing it Up: The Process of Bringing International Children’s Books to the US.” Moderated by USBBY board member Marianne Martens, the panel centered on the book Heartsinger by Karlijn Stoffels, recently published by Arthur A. Levine books. Panelists included author Karlijn Stoffels, translator Laura Watkinson, editor Cheryl Klein, and publisher Arthur Levine.

Karlijn Stoffels set the tone by reading a short excerpt from the original and very poetic Dutch text, followed by translator Laura Watkinson reading the same in English. While Heartsinger is Karlijn’s first book to be published in English, at home in the Netherlands, she is well-known as an award-winning author of fourteen children’s books that have been translated into many other languages—from German to Japanese. Publisher Arthur Levine described how he chooses books from abroad, often basing his selection first on recommendations from editor friends in other countries, then on readers’ reports from his network of trusted multi-lingual readers, and finally on sample translations. While of course a good plot is essential, Arthur’s top priority is always beautiful writing, and Heartsinger had it all.

A powerpoint with screenshots of the edited manuscript showed the audience how Cheryl and Laura negotiated problematic phrases in order to preserve the author’s meaning. Greatly amusing the audience, Cheryl described how the translator’s original term: “Woo-hooo” became re-written, in order to avoid any “frat-boy” connotations.

Careful editing is a key component of translation, but how translated works are marketed and presented to their audience is equally important, and Arthur explained how certain marketing choices were made with Heartsinger’s publication. For example, the Scholastic English-language edition feels slightly longer than the Dutch, because in order for a book to be eligible in schools as a “book report book,” it must be at least 100 pages long. But in this case, adding spacing to the text also gave the book an elegant feel. The table of contents was reworked in the English edition, which made it necessary for the author to change the last sentence slightly, in order to preserve the circular nature of the story that existed in the original Dutch. But the most obvious change was the new cover for the English language edition. The Dutch cover features a wooden carving of a woman’s bare-breasted torso—and while this relates directly to a character in the book who carves figureheads for ships, Cheryl worried that in America, this cover would lead to instant book-banning, and instead, chose to focus on a different character.

The first time that the author, translator, publisher, and editor were in the same room at the same time was literally just hours before the presentation. But despite this, it was very clear during the panel that the translation had been done out of a great sense of mutual respect: the editor, translator, and publisher’s respect for the author’s meaning, and the author’s respect for publishing her book in a culturally different marketplace. Karlijn was visibly very pleased with the English translation of Koningsdochter, Zeemanslief.

Laura Watkinson, who is British born, but lives in The Hague, said that she immediately felt at home with Karlijn’s language, and found the book easy to translate—clearly, in this case, the author and translator formed a perfect match. Although she was (unnecessarily) nervous about her English capabilities before the panel, Karlijn was a not only a very fluent speaker, she demonstrated a flair for humor in English, joking with the audience during the Q&A session.

The panel was well-attended, with an audience of approximately 100 people, and was followed by a lengthy and engaged Q&A session.
Michael Scott to Speak at USBBY Cosponsored Session at NCTE in Philadelphia.

Irish-born author, Michael Scott, writes in multiple genres, for a range of ages, and for readers in 20 countries. One of Ireland's most prolific authors for young adults, he knows how to collect, write, and tell a tale. During the USBBY-sponsored session at NCTE, Philadelphia, Michael will introduce the audience to Irish myths, legends, fantasies, and folktales (Sunday, November 22, from 11:30 am to 12:45 p.m.).

The first of his six-part epic fantasy, The Alchemyst, explores "The Secrets of the Immortal Nicholas Flamel," the 14th century alchemist. Scott has produced a fast-paced set of openers that "romp across time and space" following Flamel toward an epic battle between good and evil involving a pair of modern teens. A starred review in Publisher's Weekly claimed, "... saving the world from the forces of evil gets a fresh look here as [Scott] incorporates ancient myth and legend and sets it firmly, pitch-perfect, in present-day California." The next two adventures in the series track the major characters, 15-year-old twins, to Paris and London. In interviews, Scott has described the teens as the only invented characters. Every other major player has roots in myth and legend.

Considered one of the leading authorities on the folklore of the Celtic lands, Scott has authored a definitive new collection, Classic Irish Folktales. He is also a scriptwriter, producing documentaries and dramas for television, stage, and screen. Michael Scott writes books readers find on their own (the reason for placement on the New York Times bestseller lists), but teachers will be deeply informed by this crowd-pleasing authority and author.

Looking Ahead to IRA 2010 in Chicago:
USBBY Session Features Kate Smith Milway

Kate Smith Milway is the author of One Hen, the story of a West African boy, Kojo, who receives a small loan to buy a chicken and takes flight as an entrepreneur. Katie has coordinated community development programs in Africa and Latin America for Food for the Hungry, consulted on village banking in Senegal with World Vision, and was a delegate to the 1992 Earth Summit. She has written books and articles on sustainable development and is currently a partner with The Bridgespan Group—a nonprofit advisor to nonprofits and philanthropy based in Boston, Massachusetts. Katie’s first children’s book Cappuccina Goes to Town, won a Readers’ Choice Award in her home province of British Columbia. In 2009, she founded One Hen, Inc., a nonprofit that equips educators with stories and interactive activities that inspire young learners to global citizenship, emphasizing values of personal initiative, financial responsibility, global awareness and giving back. Ms. Milway holds a B.A. from Stanford University, a Masters in European Studies from the Free University of Brussels, and an MBA from INSEAD, in France.
What’s New at IBBY?

V. Ellis Vance, USBBY Executive Secretary

IBBY Publicity

The International Board on Books for Young People has reached an agreement with an experienced publicity and promotion agency, Susan Raab Associates, to more actively promote the Hans Christian Andersen Awards, the IBBY-Asahi Reading Promotion Awards, and other major IBBY Activities. Susan Raab is a member of USBBY. IBBY will be building an international media database where email press releases can be sent directly to media outlets. Liz Page, IBBY Executive Secretary, has contacted national sections, including USBBY, to ask for help in providing key media contacts that are interested in children, children’s books, reading, and literacy. Doris Gebel, chair of the USBBY Publicity Committee, will be the contact with IBBY on this project.

IBBY Partners

In August of 2005, the International Board on Books for Young People entered into a memorandum of understanding with the International Reading Association and the International Federation of Library Associations and Institutions for the purpose of establishing a closer working relationship between the three organizations around the intrinsic value and importance of reading and literacy. In so doing, the organizations agreed to work together on the formalization of partnerships among IBBY, IRA, and IFLA through establishing associated status with each other, based on common interests, and on maximizing each others’ strengths to enhance effectiveness and outreach. This included exchange of expertise, joint statements, declarations, and manifestos, joint advocacy and support for each others’ advocacy activities, joint research activities, joint workshops and/or training sessions, joint projects, joint publications, and links to each other on the websites of the allied organizations.

In subsequent meetings between the three organizations, two major projects have been agreed upon: a joint project to create a database for Reading Promotion projects and an appeal to national sections of the three organizations to work more closely with each other at the national section level. This includes reading out to local IRA and IFLA members in each country to join each others national sections and to find ways to strengthen the work of the organizations by expanding the number of people working toward common goals.

This presents a perfect opportunity to reach out to teachers, reading specialists, and librarians in the United States to join USBBY. This also provides an opportunity to work more closely with reading, literacy, and library groups such as IRA, NCTE, ALA, and the Children’s Book Council in co-sponsoring projects and activities at the national, state, and local levels.

IBBY Membership

There are currently 71 national sections in IBBY worldwide. Interest in future membership has been expressed by three countries in the United Arab Emirates, Cambodia, and Senegal.

IBBY Congresses

The Congress 2010 in Santiago de Compostela is proceeding as planned with about 250 participants pre-registered to date. A 20% registration discount is offered for those registering by September 30 and 10% for those registering by May 2010. The call for papers will end in October and will be announced in January 2010. The website is www.ibbycompostela2010.org.

At the IBBY Executive Council meeting in Bologna, Italy in March, Oaxaca, Mexico, was selected as the site for the 2014 World Congress. Oaxaca, a beautiful small city known for its archaeological sites, is about an hour’s flight from Mexico City.

As previously announced, the 2012 Congress will be held in London, England.

IBBY International Children’s Book Day 2011

Estonia has been selected by the IBBY Executive Committee to sponsor the ICBD for 2011. In being selected, they will develop a poster, designed by an Estonian illustrator, and activities that will be disseminated and used in countries around the World. Canada, Iran, and Mexico also applied to sponsor ICBD this year. Both Canada and Iran had been selected previously as has the United States. It was suggested that sections having previously sponsored the ICBD will be considered only if there are no new applicants forthcoming. This gives more National Sections the opportunity to participate in IBBY activities, including the ICBD.

IBBY Partners and Friends Page on the USBBY Website
USBBY has added a Partners and Friends Page on the USBBY Website, www.usbbby.org. USBBY’s twinning partners, Haiti, Lebanon, Palestine, South Africa, and Zambia have been contacted to provide articles, newsletters, and photographs highlighting their activities and projects so that USBBY members can become more aware of what is happening in other countries around the world. South Africa and Lebanon have already responded with information and these are currently on the website. Haiti and Palestine have promised to follow-up with articles and photos that will be placed on the website when they arrive and the Lubuto Library Project in Zambia will continue to send its project newsletter that will be on the website as well.

Thanks to the generosity of USBBY members who have contributed to the Special Projects Fund, IBBY Zimbabwe has completed the construction of its website. To view the activities and projects of one of IBBY’s newest national sections, Zimbabwe, visit the website at www.ibbyzimbabwe.co.zw. The IBBY Zimbabwe website also has a link to the USBBY website and its twinning partner IBBY Ireland.

IBBY 32nd Congress — Santiago De Compostela
Plan Now to Attend!

2010: The Spanish Section of IBBY will host the 32nd IBBY Congress in Santiago de Compostela. Insider’s Perspective
Inside the Internationale Jugendbibliothek 60th Anniversary and Poetry Symposium

In the last issue of the USBBY newsletter, the “Insider’s Perspective” focused on Junko Yokota’s experience as a researcher at the International Youth Library during her university sabbatical. In this issue Sylvia Vardell and Junko continue our look inside the library by describing the library’s recent 60 year celebration where poetry was a focus. Sylvia, Junko, and other scholars from around the world gathered and families were invited for a special event. Both Sylvia’s written account of the poetry symposium and Junko’s pictures of children celebrating the 60th anniversary of the library through poetry experiences point to the library’s active role in sharing international literature.

I was honored to be a visiting scholar at the Internationale Jugend Bibliothek (International Youth Library or IYL) from 22-28 June, 2009. While there, I conducted a small research project on international poetry and participated in the “In Short” presentations of poets from around the world at the two-day Symposium on poetry held at the library. I researched the life and work of two American and one Canadian poet: Kristine O’Connell George, Douglas Florian, and JonArno Lawson, and presented a poem by each poet. Other poets from around the world were introduced with short biographical vignettes and select poems read aloud by the language specialists at the IYL. The Symposium was a beautifully organized event held in the historic Blutenburg Castle where the library is housed. Some 100+ attendees were treated to a full docket of poets, authors, and artists from several European countries, along with an extensive exhibit of illustrations from international poetry books from around the world. Elegant receptions and meals rounded out the experience. Here is just a sampling of nuggets from the speeches (which were simultaneously translated into English for non-German speakers).

*IYL Library Director, Christiane Raabe: “A child becomes first a poet and then a human being.”
*German poet and author, Jutta Richter: “Poems are the fastest way to put the soul in order.”
*British poet and author, Andrew Fusek Peters: “Poetry is a broad church for what is and isn’t poetry.”
*Dutch poet and artist, Ted van Lieshout: “A book can be an object of art, not just a carrier of text.” He added, “A poem can unsettle you—it’s not just to put the ‘soul in order’—it’s both.” He likes “putting it into perspective”—taking sad stories and making them better and taking a great story and adding a bit of sadness. It makes a text more beautiful.
*Austrian author and poet, Gerda Anger-Schmidt: Austrians are big into puns and playfulness.
*French author and artist, Lionel Le Neouanic: “Anything that is playful is poetry as well.” (He performed French rap!)
*Expert Panel: Poetry is “the most intimate part of literature…. Although a poem is short, you need to spend a lot of time with it.”

Wonderful week! Wonderful experience! I learned so much in such a short time and I hope I was able to contribute a bit with information about American and Canadian children’s poetry, too. I have written a bit about my research and experiences on my poetry blog (PoetryforChildren.blogspot), as well as in my poetry column for BOOKLINKS magazine. It’s always gratifying to see poetry on the docket at conferences, but to spend two days on this topic exclusively was an absolute delight!

United States Board on Books for Young People (USBBY) Announces US Nominees for 2010 Hans Christian Andersen Awards

The United States Board on Books for Young People (USBBY) – the US National Section of The International Board on Books for Young People (IBBY) – is proud to announce that author Walter Dean Myers and illustrator Eric Carle are the United States nominees for the 2010 Hans Christian Andersen Awards. The Hans Christian Andersen Awards are presented every two years by IBBY to an author and an illustrator, nominated by any IBBY National Section, whose complete works have made an important and lasting contribution to children's literature worldwide. The Hans Christian Andersen Awards are among the most distinguished awards for children's books internationally, and are sometimes referred to as the "Nobel Prize" of children's literature.

IBBY National Sections from 33 countries have made their nominations, submitting 29 authors and 27 illustrators as candidates for the 2010 Hans Christian Andersen Awards. For the complete list of nominees, visit http://www.ibby.org/index.php?id=962. An international jury from eleven countries on four continents will select the final winners, which will be announced at a press conference at the Bologna Children's Bookfair on Monday, March 22, 2010. The US member of the current Hans Christian Andersen International Jury is Ernest Bond of Salisbury University, Maryland. Dr. Amy McClure, Professor of Education at Ohio Wesleyan University in Delaware, Ohio, Chair of the committee that selected USBBY's nominees for the award, said "Our committee chose Walter Dean Myers and Eric Carle as the US nominees for the 2010 Hans Christian Andersen Awards because each is an American cultural and literary icon. Walter Dean Myers is a versatile writer whose work has been praised for its candid voice, memorable characters, and gritty realism. He has a unique understanding of young people and the challenges they face negotiating contemporary realities. Eric Carle’s picture books are known and loved all over the world. His brightly colored collage illustrations are deceptively simple yet intellectually complex in their portrayal of universal themes that resonate with young children. This honor is perfectly timed as 2009 is the 40th anniversary of the publication of Mr. Carle’s timeless classic, The Very Hungry Caterpillar”. Past USBBY nominees who have won the Hans Christian Andersen Medal are Meindert DeJong (Author, 1962), Maurice Sendak (Illustrator, 1970), Scott O’Dell (Author, 1972), Paula Fox (Author, 1978), Virginia Hamilton (Author, 1992), and Katherine Paterson (Author, 1998).
How Does that Translate?
by Peg Ciszek

Global warming, depleting natural resources, and alternate energy sources are environmental topics that appear in media broadcasts, publications, discussions and documentaries. In the book Toby Alone by French playwright Timothée de Fom belle, the reader explores a new world, a complex civilization of people of millimeter stature who live on a brown and green planet - an Oak Tree. They use the Tree for food, home construction, and entertainment. One renowned scientist believes their world to be fragile; it might be a living organism. When his research provides him with an energy source from crude sap, droves of people suggest uses for the invention. Since the majority of suggestions would be detrimental to the Tree, the scientist refuses to share his findings, putting his family including his son Toby in grave danger. This book is Toby's story and is included in this list of recently translated books.

Other recent translations return favorite characters to us. Manolito from Spain bounces back with more hilarious adventures, Markus from Norway returns trying to master love, and Balsa the female warrior from Japan returns to her homeland to clear the name of her mentor.

Books for Young Children

Big Wolf lives happily under a tree on top of a hill. One day he sees a wolf in the distance. Big Wolf is uncertain about the stranger but becomes less threatened when the wolf comes nearer and he sees that it is small. Little Wolf sits under the tree near Big Wolf but neither animal talks. As night falls Big Wolf notices Little Wolf shivering. He offers just a teeny corner of his blanket to the visitor. The following day Big Wolf begins his daily activities. Little Wolf follows and imitates. Just when Big Wolf is beginning to feel comfortable with the intruder, he notices that Little Wolf is gone. Big Wolf realizes how much he has come to enjoy Little Wolf's company and when Little Wolf returns it is decided that he will stay. The playful bold illustrations enhance this gentle story that will definitely be a winner with youngsters.

On the right side of each double page spread, there are five drawings of animals. The animals are involved in a variety of activities or are dressed in a medley of costumes. On the left page, the text reads, "Who has a bushy tail?" "Who is worried about falling?" "Who could't decide which necklace to wear?" The text is to be matched with a picture on the right. Youngsters will enjoy finding the animal that is the match and by process of elimination they will be able find the more difficult selections.

A young boy with a large candy bar in his hand describes for the reader his love of chocolate. He talks about chocolates that crunch, ones that are gooey, and those that melt in your mouth. Some chocolates have surprises. Only taking a bite out of them will reveals what is inside - an almond, a cherry or maybe nougat. Chocolates cheer you up and make great presents. People who eat chocolates have different styles. Some are dainty eaters and then there are the "monster munchers." The final realization is that with all the goodness that chocolate brings the downside is that it is difficult to eat just a few.

On each left side of the double page spread is the question, What is This? The photographs on the opposite page are of everyday objects such as a garden hose, a clothes pin, buttons, carrots. When one flips the page, the photographs have been altered with drawings or additional objects to create unique creatures. The garden hose becomes a snake, the clothes pin becomes an alligator and the buttons are now noses on pigs. The pictures will stretch the imagination of young readers who may also see a cow in their swiss cheese. This German translation may inspire some great art projects.

As the reader unfolds this yellow board book of seventeen panels, the story of a young boy who finds a toy duck also unfolds. Each panel describes the boy's play activities with the toy. The boy uses the duck for a hat later it is placed over the drain in the bathtub as a plug. When the book is flipped over, it is now blue and the title is "It's Useful to Have a Boy." This time the toy duck describes its play with the boy. The activities are the same but the perspective has changed. Instead of being a hat for the boy, the duck is using the boy's head to get a better view. Duck is no longer a plug for the bathtub but the drain is his sleeping hole at night. The book can be read as one usually reads a book flipping each page individually or it can be expanded to its full length of over eight feet and enjoyed in new format.

Bear has a problem and he is looking for help. When he approaches humans for assistance, he never gets beyond "I have a little problem" before he is interrupted by the professionals who think that they have the solution. The inventor provides him with wings to make him lighter, the tailor gives him a scarf to make him handsome, the doctor feels that vitamins are the answer. Frustrated bear finally meets up with a fly who is willing to listen. Bear's problem? He is afraid of his dark cave. Fly just happens to be looking for lodging and suggests moving in with bear. Bear's problem resolved, the two unusual roommates walk off together, fly sitting comfortably on bear's shoulder. What child or adult could not identify with this tale.

Books for Older Children

Noah, Theo, and Max join Rebecca in a visit to the home of her recently deceased grandfather. It is rumored that his house is haunted. While exploring through the dark house, Rebecca stumbles on a large machine. She switches it on and is suddenly transported to an alternate world. Max follows her into the strange world in a rescue attempt. The machine becomes damaged and the two remaining boys struggle to repair it so that Max and Rebecca will be able to return. Packed with action and suspense, the graphic novel adventure continues in volumes two and three of The Elsewhere Chronicle series.

Toby is just millimeters tall as are all the people that live in the branches of the Tree. His father is a renowned scientist whose focus of research is to prove that the Tree is a living organism. His controversial findings result in the family being exiled to the Lower Branches of the Tree. While the family is in exile, Joe Mitch and his unscrupulous developers gain political power. Eventually Toby's parents are imprisoned and sentenced to death. Toby is able to escape but is relentlessly pursued by Joe and his gang. Toby discovers that there is life beyond the Tree but news that his parents are still alive and that a female friend is in trouble sends Toby on a journey back to his home. The complex storytelling, a generous amount of flashbacks and the cruel acts by Joe Mitch and his gang make this book appropriate for older readers and a great book for discussion.

Toby Alone has been translated into twenty-two languages. The 2009 Marsh Award for Children's Literature in Translation was awarded to translator Sarah Aralizzone. The book has enjoyed great success in France winning the Prix Sorcières, 2007 and in Italy the Premio Andersen, 2008. The sequel Toby and the Secrets of the Tree will be published in the fall of 2010.

Markus is in love for the fifteenth time in two months. It's Ellen Christine this time. She has such pretty ears. Sigmund, who is Markus' best friend attempts to bring the two together but only succeeds in creating a romantic link for himself. As Sigmund tries to straighten things out, Markus falls in love with Mona. Or is it now Alexandra? In a grand attempt to help his friend, Sigmund stages the play Romeo and Juliet with Markus' current love in the role of Juliet. At the same time that Marcus is trying to simplify his complicated love life, Markus' widowed father is also hopeful of loving again. Several girls also assist Markus in his pursuit of love and he learns that "no-strings-attached friendship across the sexes is comfortable." This comical, entertaining second book does stand alone.

Manolito Four-Eyes (only the cool kids have nicknames) returns in the second book in the series. Manolito lives in a blue collar suburb of Madrid with his parents, grandfather, and young brother "the Bozo." His adventures this time include cutting his brother's hair (and then cutting it some more), forming the Filthy Feet Gang that fights against evil and requires members to avoid washing their feet, and comforting but hilarious times spent with his SuperGrandpa. Urberuaga's illustrations add to the wit and humor of the zany tales. More adventures are planned for the third volume due in spring 2010.

In the second book in the Moribito series, the female warrior Balsa returns to her homeland in an attempt to clear the name of Jigura who hid and protected her from assassins when she was a child. Secrecy was essential to keep Balsa safe and Jigura's family never knew why he left. On the journey back to Kanbal, Balsa rescues two children who are threatened by hyohlu, the guardian of darkness. Though she swears the two children to secrecy, her mission becomes known and soon Balsa will become involved in a life threatening secret ritual.

The setting for this story is the small community of Kinngait in the Canadian Arctic. An young Inuit girl, Alego visits her grandmother. It is low tide and Grandmother is going to teach Alego how to go clam digging. While she searches for clams, Alego also discovers other sea life in tide pools. After collecting the clams, Alego and Grandmother join Grandfather in a delicious meal of clams and hot tea. A map and illustrated glossary of sea creatures that Alego found are included. Full page illustrations beautifully capture the setting. English/Inuktitut.

Publishing Opportunities

World of Words E-Journals
Worlds of Words (WOW) is an International Collection of Children’s and Adolescent Literature with a physical collection of over 25,000 volumes focusing on world cultures and indigenous peoples housed at the University of Arizona, College of Education. WOW’s commitment to creating an international network of people who have the vision of bringing books and children together, thereby opening windows on the world, is enacted through several facets, including two on-line journals. WOW Stories and WOW Reviews offer resources that can be accessed on the WOW website at wowlit.org under the “journals” tab. These publications and databases are free and are exception classroom resources. WOW invites you to submit articles to either of these journals. Calls for submissions can be found on the Web site.

BOOKBIRD — CALL FOR MANUSCRIPTS

Bookbird: A Journal of International Children’s Literature of the International Board on Books for Young People (IBBY) invites manuscripts on a broad array of topics and formats related to children’s literature that will be of particular interest to an international audience. Contributions are invited not only from scholars and critics but also from editors, translators, publishers, librarians, classroom educators and children’s book authors and illustrators or anyone working in the field of children’s literature.

Bookbird is peer reviewed and is published quarterly (January, April, July, October). Manuscripts will be judged on a variety of criteria including professional/scholarly qualities and the degree to which the content is of interest to an international audience. Articles are published in English, but where authors have no translation facilities, we can accept contributions in most major European languages.

Length: Up to 3000 words. Format: Word for Windows (Mac users please save your document in rich text format – RTF) as an email attachment; send illustrations as JPG attachments.

Style: The full name/s of author/s, address, telephone, email and affiliation should appear ONLY in the title page of the manuscript. References should be cited by name and date, for example (Yokota, 1993) using APA style.

Deadline: Bookbird is published every quarter, in January, April, July, October. Papers may be submitted at any time, but it is unlikely that your paper, if accepted for publication, would be published for at least six to nine months from the date of submission to allow time for refereeing and the production process.

Contact details: Please send a copy to both Editors, Cathy Kurkjian and Sylvia Vardell at: kurkjianc@gmail.com; kurkjianc@comcast.net;SVardell@twu.edu. Please put Bookbird submission followed by your initials in the subject line. Please remember to include your full name and contact details (including postal address), together with your professional affiliation and/or a few lines describing your area of work in the body of your email.
