USBBy and TeachingBooks Announce Partnership

The United States Board on Books for Young People (USBBy) and TeachingBooks are pleased to announce a new partnership. Nick Glass, founder of TeachingBooks and a longtime USBBy member, is sharing a complimentary personal license with each USBBy member. TeachingBooks will display annotations of international children's and young adult books on its website, written by USBBy members.

USBBy President, Evelyn B. Freeman, said, "A personal license to TeachingBooks is an amazing benefit for USBBy members that has a monetary value of $125. We are very grateful to Nick Glass for his generosity."

"We all love children's and young adult books, so it is satisfying to give access to this digital library of meaningful book and author connections to all USBBy members," shared Nick Glass. "USBBy has created an easy system for each member to get access, and once it is set up, just look up a favorite book and enjoy interviews, performances, discussion questions, and so much more. And to include USBBy's marvelously crafted annotations on TeachingBooks is a fabulous addition."

About USBBy: The United States Board on Books for Young People (USBBy) is one of the 81 national sections of the International Board on Books for Young People, based in Basel, Switzerland. The organization's mission is to promote international peace and understanding through children's and young adult books. To learn more about USBBy: <http://www.usbby.org>

About TeachingBooks: TeachingBooks is a "one-stop-shop" of 230,000+ vetted digital materials that bring to life children's and young adult books. USBBy members will find resources for all Outstanding International Books, as well as special collections including a Diverse Books Toolkit, Library Programming and Collection Analysis Tools, Hands-Free Book Browsing, Virtual Teaching Ideas, and more.
